Outdoor Math: Fun Activities for Every Season (Hardback)

By Emma Adbæge, Emma Adbeage

Kids Can Press, Canada, 2016. Hardback. Book Condition: New. Emma Adbæge (illustrator). 241 x 203 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book. In this innovative book, Emma Adbæge encourages children to get outside, where they can have fun interacting with the natural world while learning math. Adbæge has created twenty-two outdoor activities, organized by season. Through play, children will learn about numeracy and arithmetic, as well as math concepts such as shapes, time, greater/less than, even and odd numbers, patterns and grids. The activities have simple-to-follow instructions and are accompanied by adorable illustrations that provide clear visual demonstrations. The natural materials required --- stones, pinecones, snowballs, worms --- are easy to find in many environments. Supplementary spreads introduce the numbers 1 to 10 and further explore addition/subtraction and multiplication/division, with simplified explanations and illustrated examples. Studies have shown that learning outdoors helps kids retain information and skills, and that physically active children perform better in a variety of subjects --- including math. This book could be used alongside other math coursework all school year, since the activities have direct curricular applications. While the thrust of the book is math, there are also science lessons here, particularly regarding the properties of...
